HOGE DEVELOPMENT COMPANY ENCOUNTERS FINE BODY RICH ORE

During the past week the Hoge Development Company have made one of the most important strikes that has occurred in this camp for a long time, and one that will undoubtedly be of great benefit to this community, as well as Mr. Hoge and his associates, who have already expended a very large sum of money in the development of the vast territory which they now own and control.

The ore shoot that they have opened up, which looks so promising for a big rich ore body on their 300 foot level, is the downward extension of the pilot or prospect shaft vein, which they opened up to a depth of 54 feet prior to the sinking of their big compartment shaft to a depth of 326 feet.

The values on the upper level, in their pilot shaft, by actual mill tests, showed an average value of approximately $45.00 per ton and a width of from two to four feet.

On the 300 foot level, on the same vein, the average width is about four feet, and a careful sampling of the entire vein from wall to wall, showed values of $68.00 per ton.

Picked samples ranged all the way from $200 pes toon on the surface, to over $300 per ton on the 300-foot level. The quartz as exhibited at the Chamber of Commerce headquarters, is of the heavy sulphide variety and shows but very little free gold. It is, in fact, similar to the Murchie, and a great many mine operators and engineers have commented opon the ore of both properties, being so near alike that they could scarcely tell which was which.

The company, under the supervision of Messrs. Hoge and Schiffner, are steadily carrying on adlitional exploration work, upon a day and night schedule, and are expecting other important developments within the near future, to the east of their present developments.

They are also contemplating some additional prospecting developments, under the advice of some expert geologists, who have kindly given to Mr. Hoge their private opinions as to where they believe the old Harmony channel might be located, on account of their having already proven where it was not located, in their previous optrations.

Messrs. Uren, Archibald and Schiffner have all three freely expressed their good opinion of these properties and all are predicting that this company will eventually have one of the largest producers in the famous '49 camp.

N. I. D. DEFICIT IS DISCUSSED AT MEETING

At a meeting of land owners and business men held in Grass Valley Friday, Manager William Durbrow of the Nevada Irrigation District, laid before the meeting plans for the temporary financing necessary to meet the bond interest obligations of the district. This deficit is largely due to the inability of the Irrigation District to collect the 1927 water bill from the P. G. & E. It is hoped this matter will soon be settled and the funds available for bond interest.

The plan for raising the money needed at this time, about $140,000, was agreed upon. The bond syndicate will furnish one-half and the balance which the district must raise will be secured by notes of Nevada and Placer county people. A small land tax will be maintained for the present. It is expected the district will be in good financial conditionby the end of 1933.

YUBA PASS HIGHWAY ON DAYTIME SCHEDULE

Notice has been received from Ralph W. Brown, the contractor who is grading the Yuba Highway between Downieville and Sierra City, that the highway will be open to traffic between 9 a. m. and 5 p. m. after July 1st. This is in accordance with his cntract.

The highway is in excellent condition from Nevada City to about five miles beyond Downieville, where the constructin work is in progress fr the nekt three miles and as all work is now being done at night this stretch should usually be in good condition. From beyond the construction wrk t Sattley the highway is in excellent shape.

The Grass Valley Chamber of Commerce has passed the information on to all automobile associations, travel agencies and chambers of commerce in northern California and it is expected this rute will soon be as popular as ever again as it is the shortest and best route over the mountains to Tahoe and the Feather Rreiv country.

MEMORIAL PARK DEEDED TO GRASS VALLEY

At last Tuesday's session of the Grass Valley city council a resolution was passed expressing the willingness of the Ctiy of Grass Valley to accept three parcels of land which go to make up Memorial Park from the Newmont Mining Corporation, successors to the Empire-Star Mines Company.

The Newmont Company is now drawing up the deeds and the transfer will be made at an early date. The mineral rights are the only exception made in the deed, which conveys a clear a clear title to the park property.

During the past nine year the park has shown wonderful improvement due to the cooperation of the city council, the chamber of commerce, various civic bodies and the many public spirited citizens who have contributed not only much financial assistance but also of their time to the many problems arising.

The financing of the park requirements has been by personal contributions and this system will be continued for the present at least.

MOTOR TRANSPORT DISCONTIUES SERVICE

The Railroad Commission has granted the United Motor Transport Lines Inc. permission t discontinue service to Higgins Corner near Grass Valley effective July 4th. A. L. Schneider, secretary f the motor freight line, testified his company had been losing money since the inception of the service and could see no better outlook for the future.

When the United Motor Transport Lines made application for a permit to truck freight from Auburn to Higgins Corner a bitter fight ensued before the Railroad Commission between the Narrow Gauge and its loyal supporters in Nevada City and Grass Valley and the motor freight line. Two actions in this case were still pending when the discontinuance order was issued and were promptly dismissed.

BERT MEEK PLEDGES UKIAH TAHOE ROAD

In his talk before the members of the Rotary Club of Grass Valley and invited friends B. B. Meek assurel his listeners that the present state administration considered the Tahoe Ukiah road as one of the most important of the secondary roads in the state. But the fact that there are 1770 miles of secondary roads in the state with only $2,500,000 to spend on them, makes it necessary to postpone the completion to the highway to the east until a later date. There are still twenty miles to complete the road and join it to the Victory Highway, to the right of Lake Sapulding. This twenty miles will cost approximately $1,200,000 as it is the desire to make this a first class road in every detail and not a "coyote road." As the money becomes available the contracts will be let.

With Mr. Meek at the Rotary luncheon were C. H. Purcell, state highway engineer and Charles Whitmore, third district engineer, and James K. O'Brien. S. Lee Leiter was chairman of the day. President Jack Wolff presided. The guest list included Arthur Hoge, F. F. Cassidy, R. J. Bennetts, William Griffith, Geo. Calanan, Thomas Richards, Fred Worth, C R. Adams and Phil Scadden of Nevada City and other prominent men of the county included Schwartz, Tom Mulcahy, Paul Ulrich, William Ulrich, William Teagarden, E. K. Smart, Ed Hunt, Harry Goudge, H. I. Grasser, E. C. Kinyon and Robert T. Ingram.

R. R. Meek and J. K. O'Brien, who is affectionately called the Father of the Tahoe Ukiah road were members of the Commission of 1921 who started the road. During the Richardson administration the road was allowed to languish but Mr. Meek took up the road again with renewed interest in the present administration and $288,000 has been spent on the first 11 miles.

A. P. RIDGE ON VISIT MINING PROPERTIES

A. P. Ridge of Salt Lake City, formerly connected with the Jefford Undertaking firm here, was in town several days last week. He was accompanied by H. C. Meyers of Boise, Idaho and H. A. Thompson also of Salt Lake City. They were joined in Nevada City by John C. Stanton, Maanger of Bradstreet, San Francisco and drove Saturday to the Omega mine.

Messrs. Ridge, Meyers and Thompson are on a tour of inspection of the mining properties that their brokerage offices are sponsoring. They made the trip by auto and upon leaving here will visit the Pacific Northwest.

Mr. Ridge's old friends were all very glad to see him. Incidently he keeps intouch with Nevada City through the columns of The Nugget.

YOUNG GIRL DROWNS AT LAKE VERA SATURDAY

Little 13-year-old Lois McShane of Sacramento was drowned late Saturday afternoon while swimming at Lake Vera. The girl was a member of the Sacramento Camp Fire Girls who are spending two weeks at their camp at Lake Vera. The young lady went in swimming with the rest of the group and was thought to have gone out of the water before the other members.

Members of the Forest Reserve, under the direction of Wm. Gracey and others, went out this morning to aid in the search. When it was found that her bathing suit was the only article of clothing missing a search was made of the lake and the body was recovered from under the diving raft. It is thought that the Miss McShane dove off the raft and came up under the raft and was unable to extract herself.

Her parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. W. McShane of 3013 42nd street, Sacramento, were informed of her disappearance and arrived here yesterday morning.

The body was taken to Sacramento by the Holmes undertaking establishment.

The accident cast a pall over the entire community as well as the various camps at Lake Vera as this is the first fatality at the lake in spite of the hundreds of girls who have camped there for the past three years.

OLD RELICS GETTING TO BE SCARCE ARTICLES

To be sure, there are very few so-called relics left in this town. Albert Dressler got a cmparatively small portion of the missing ones. There have been collectors here who have been insolent demanding sale of old furniture regardless of its associations, paying a mere pittance and selling it for fabulous prices.

The chief difficulty is our ignorance of what comprises relics. How many know that the old express envelopes bring good prices? That a pony express envelope sells for $25? How many readers have consigned Godey's Magazines to the trash pile? How many have destroyed family letters written or received here in the '50's. Do you know that old liquor licenses are valuable? What has become of the numerous copies of Bean's Directory? Please don't blame others for the scarcity of relics. Those who sold put commercialism before patriotism. And what has become of the relics that were turned over to the Half Century Club? Are they in a fire proof building or in a private home unprotected and forgotten?

Go through your attics nw and find out the value of your 'tash" an it is qurdite possible that much will be found valuable.

NEVADA CITY IN '49 ATTIRE FOR GRAND CELEBRATION ON FOURTH

The display windows of the merchants are filled with interesting old relics reminders of bygone days. In answer to the appeal sent out by the Fourth of July Committee the people of Nevada City and surrounding territory have diligently searched their old trunks and safety boxes and these have yielded a hetrogenous collection from old dangerous firearms to precious jewelry. The merchants have been most kind in donating their windows for the displays.

Francis Hogan of Hogan's Shoe Store was the first to display the relics of early days and his window quickly became filled with an interesting collection consisting mostly of firearms and other impliments of the gold rush days. Numerous photographs add to the collection. Hogan's shoe store was also the first to decorate the store front with the slabs that have been donated by the Arbogast Bros. Lumber Company and hauled in free by various truck owners. It is hopel that other store owners will follow suit.

On Commercial street George Gildersleeve was the first to have his store front covered.

The Alpha Hardware Store has a setting of an old fashioned parlor containing a horsehair set, an organ and a marble top table and several braided rugs. An old leather trunk an old quilt is also shown.

The main feature of S. Lee Leiter's display is a quilt which is 150 years old beloging to Mrs. Hattie Legg, the materal of which was hand woven and hand-dyed. The remarkable features was the brightness of the colors.

Jewelry, old photographs and old clocks are featured in A. Hartung's window. One old clock is a reproduction of the clock used in Columbus' time and is in running order.

The displays are too numerous to mention but everyone is worth while and every merchant is cooperating.

After having languished in interest for some weeks the '49 Celebration has gained momentum until the whole town has become enthused. The old buildings on Commercial street have been cleaned out and the fronts of the buildings are rapidly receiving their slab fronts to give the frontier appearance. Gambling games are being resurrected from the dust of bygone ages and set up.

A number of ladies have already appeared in their full sweeping costumes and daily another costume appears. It is indeed gratifying to the committee to see the interest being taken.

Chairman Frank Davies of the general committee and his secretary Miles Couglin, have worked tirelessly for the success of the enterprise fiving unstintingly of their time and effort even to ngelecting their own affairs. They are surely to be commended for their efforts and deserve the thanks of the townspeople.

The following is the list of floats that have been promised so far:

Float bearing old timers from County Hospital, Fire Department of Nevada City, Native Sons, Native Daughters, Alpha Hardware, P. G. & E., Standard Oil Co., Fischer Electric Shop, Plaa Grocery, Marsh Lumber Company, County Farm, Mrs. C. J. Tobiassen, Nevada City Chamber of Commere; Tom Coan, Forest Service Nevala City Nugget, Frank Davies, Plaa Service Station, Ray Teale, Foster Buffington, Chas. Hoskin & Bu Calanan, Ed. This is the fourth building and loan association to be acquired by this corporation since March 31st of this year, according to Girola. The associations which have been taken over are Contra Costy County Building and Loan Association of Oakland and San Jose. In addition to these acquisitionc a branch has been established in Sacramento.

Rbinson, former president of the Nevada County Building and Loan Association will serve as chairman of the executive committee of the new Nevada County branch of the Italian National Building and Lan Association," said Girola. "Other members of the board of directors of the Grass Valley institution will be elected members of board of directors of the Italian National Building and Loan Association and will also be appointed on the executive committee to administer affairs of the new Grass Valley Branch of Italian National."

P. L. Shobe, executive vice president of the Italian Investment Corporation, who just returned from Grass Valley, announced that arrangements had been made for a new and larger offices in the main business section of that city for this newly acquired association.

"We are modernizing our branches in order to better serve our clients," said Shobe. "Grass Valley is one of the richest centers in the state of California and we are looking forward to big business in this territory.

"This is just a beginning of our building and loan expansion program fr Northern California. We hope within the very near future to announce further acquisitions in this section of the state."

MRS. DOMENICA SOGA PASSES AWAY SATURDAY

Miss Elsie Marie Hieronimus, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Simon Hieronimus Jr., became the bride of Attillio L. DeMattei of San Francisco Sunday at high noon at a beautiful ceremony which was performed in St. Canice Church.

The bride was given in marriage by her father, and Father O'Reilly read the service.

Miss Adele Hieronimus was her sister's maid of honor and Miss Emma Muscardini, a cousin was bridesmaid. D. Brozzoni of San Francisco acted as best man.

Mrs. Paul R. Gibson, a cousin of the bride sang "Ave Maria," and Freda Hieronimus, aunt of the bride, played Lohengrin's Wedding March.

The church was beautifully decorated by gladiolas and Cecile Breuser roses, Lloyd Penrose doing the decorating.

The bride wore a lovely gown of egg shell satin and a tulle veil which was caught to the head by orange blossoms. She wore a bouquet of Lillies of the Valley and Gardinias. 1 Following the service a wedding breakfast was served at the home of the bride's parents.

The couple, after their honeymoon, will reside in San Francisco.

COZY CORNER CHAT

B. B. Meek paid The Nugget office a personal call last Monday after speaking to the Grass Valley Rotary Club. He was accompanied by J. K. O'Brien, the "Father of the Tahoe-Ukiah Highway." "Bert" Meek is one of the strongest men in the Young organization and to him we owe what has so far been done on the Tahoe-Ukiah Road. He has many friends in Nevada County who are always glad to see him.

Robert Madison of Santa Rosa announces his candidacy for the Republication Nomoination for member of the Board of Equalization for the Third District. He served as Assemblyman from Sonoma County for two terms being unopposed his second term. He has served as a member of the City Council of Santa Rosa since 1926.

When we first knew genial "Bob" Madison, his favorite indoor sport, when he could put aside his business and political life, was that of being a conjuror, bringing rabbits out of hats, coins out of the air and doing other mysterious stunts. He was a regular part of every rural amateur entertainment. We hope he will be able to conjuror the necessary votes out of the ballot box. Our good wishes go to him.

MINING CLAIMS IN NATIONAL FORESTS

Probably the cause of the movement to restrict the rights of locators in mining claims and the owners of patents thereon within the National Forests, as expressed in Senate Bill S-3774, which has passed the United States and has been referred to the house of Representatives, may be found in a decision by the District Court of Idaho, N. D., of February 11, 1928, which fully confirmed the rights of the locators of mining claims, as allocated by the existing mining laws, as covering the locations within the National Forests.

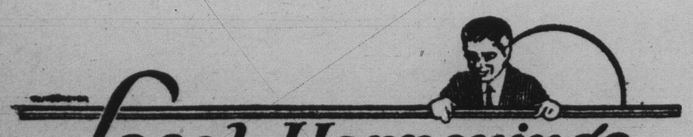
Since then a movement to curtail those rights within the National Forests has started, and the United States has passed Bill S-3774, above menioned, restricting those rights very severely in South Dakota; and we understand that a similar bill, curtailing the rights of mineral locators within the National Forests of the State of California, will be introduced in Congress, at the insistence of the Forest Service, unless a decided opposition by the mining interests of California should prevent this action.

Senate bill 3774 places the owners of mining locations and of patented mining locations within the National Forest at the mercy of the Forest Service. Rights are controlled by the term "reasonable." For instance ". . . . the right to occupy and use the surface as may be 'reasonably' necessary to carry on mining" . . . "no use of the surface of the claim or the resources therefrom not 'reasonably' required for carrying on mining shall be allowed." It is repeatedly stipulated that operations shall be under the National Forest rules and regulations. As no provision is made in the law stipulating what authority is to decide what the term "reasonably" covers, this decision is in fact left entirely to the rangers, who are not competent judges of the requisites of mining operations.

When starting the development of a mining project it is impossible to forsee what resources of the surface will have to be used. In nearly all instances water is required. According to the wording of the law under consideration, the locator is at the mercy of the Forest Service in respect to this important resource.

The application of the rules and regulations stipulated by this law will prevent any practical mining man from starting mining operations within the limits of the National Forests, thus stopping the development of new mineral resources within these reserves. The mineral products of the country are of far greater value than the forest products. Their development, as a general rule, will only slightly impair the development of forest products.

Apparently the sponsors of this bill intend to introduce its system through the entire United States. It is most is most important for those vitally interesing in mining acivity o take seps to prevent, if possible, and further move to curtail the rights of the locators of mining claims.—Engineering and Mining Journal.



Local Happenings

William H. Friedhoff of the U. S. Forest Service arrived from San Francisco and will spend sometime here on official business.

J. Dias of Alleghany, who has been ill at the Nevada City Sanitarium has returned to his home. Dr. Ormiston Swayze was attending him.

Miss Elizabeth Janes left for Colby where she will attend the summer session of the University of California.

James P. and Jay C. Coughlin, and Thorn B. English of North Columbia were business visitors in this city yesterday.

John Hooper, former resident, arrived from Richmond and is spending a few days in his old home.

Human Contacts Needed to Develop Personality

Let us swallow this important and prickly fact. Apart from our connections with other persons, we are barely individuals; we amount, all of us, to next to nothing. It is in the living touch between us and other persons, other lives, other phenomena that we move and have our being.

Strip us of our human contacts and of our contact with the living earth and the sun, and we are almost bladders of emptiness. Our individuality means nothing. A skylark that was alone on an island would be songless and meaningless, his individuality gone, running about like a mouse in the grass. But if there were one female with him, it would lift him singing into the air, and restore him his real individuality.

As a fixed object, even as an individuality or a personality, no human being, man or woman, amounts to much. The great I AM does not apply to human beings, so they may as well leave it alone. As soon as anybody, man or woman, becomes a great I AM, he becomes nothing. Man or woman, each is a flow, a flowing life. And without one another, we can't flow, just as a river cannot flow without banks.

A woman is one bank of the river of my life and the world is the other. Without the two shores my life would be a marsh. It is the relationship to woman and to my fellow men which makes me myself a river of life.—D. H. Lawrence in Scribner's Magazine.

Apparition Has Aroused Sleepy English Village

Residents of Porchester, a village on the shores of Porchester harbor, England, declare that they have seen a ghost in the castle and the village is now in the throes of a ghost scare. The apparition appeared in the traditional form of a tall white figure, but those who saw it were too frightened to make any investigations. Porchester castle dates back to Roman times and is world-famous for the ship models made by the French prisoners of war who were confined within its walls. Many people declare they have seen ghosts in the castle. The most famous of these apparitions is that of a sailor who is alleged to have declared that he would come back after death. It is believed to be his wraith which was seen walking quite recently. Ghosts seem to favor this corner of Hampshire. In the village of Warblington, some 15 miles from Porchester, the spirit of Margaret, countess of Salisbury, who was executed by order of Henry VIII, is often seen dressed as a nun, gliding about the lanes near the ruins of Warblington castle, which was once her home. —London Tit-Bits.

Unkind Nature

Nature has no kindness, no hospitality, during a rain. In the fiercest heat of sunny days she retains a secret mercy and welcomes the wayfarer to shady nooks of the woods whither the sun cannot penetrate. But she provides no shelter against her storms. It makes us shiver to think of those deep unbrageous recesses, those overshadowing banks where we found such enjoyment during the sultry afternoons. Not a twig of foliage there but would dash a little shower into our faces. . . . In such spells of weather—and it is to be supposed such weather came—Eve's bower in Paradise must have been but a cheerless and aguish kind of shelter. . . . The idea of sleeping on a couch of wet roses!—Nathaniel Hawthorne.

Unfortunate Sea Lions

The sea lion could hold his own against his natural enemies, but his real troubles began when man discovered that he was insulated with several inches of oil-bearing blubber and that his hide made good leather. Nearly 200 years ago the slaughter began on the west coast, says Nature Magazine.

Thousands of sea lions died for the enrichment of the oil hunters, until by the beginning of this century only a remnant of the vast herds which once roared and fought on their offshore rookeries is left to carry on the species.

Defiant in Suicide

A Chinese merchant closed his life here with a proverb—an indirect hint that he did not want his friends to dig into his motives for committing suicide. He had rooms on the third floor of the Bank of Communications, and at dawn made his way up to the flat room, climbed to the top of an ornamental stone effigy and leaped to the ground. He was dead when picked up. His last message, found in his room, quoted a famous Chinese proverb to the effect that each man should sweep the snow from his own doorstep, leaving his neighbor's affairs severely alone.

Professional Accounting

Very little is known of the origin of accounting as a profession. The first association of which there is record is the Collegio dei Raxonali, founded at Venice in 1581. Professional accountants probably existed in Milan at an early date, as the government established a scale of charges for them in 1742. The first Scotch professional accountant was George Watson, born in Edinburgh in 1845. In 1790 the British directory listed five. The first formal recognition given to accountants in the United States was in the laws of New York in April, 1800.

THIS AND THAT

Place slices of pineapple around the ham when baking and baste with the liquor from the pan. Serve the ham garnished with the nicely browned pineapple slices.

Horseradish is much better if grated and used within a week or two, as it loses its flavor and pungency by standing, even if well sealed. Add a little vinegar, sugar and salt to the grated root and cover tightly.

Never throw away even a small bit of cheese. Grate it, add to any cream soup, creamed potatoes, omelet or escalloped dish.

While the rhubarb is fresh and tender prepare some:

Rhubarb Conserve.—Combine four cupfuls of rhubarb cut fine, four cupfuls of sugar, two oranges, juice and rind, two lemons, juice and grated rind, one-fourth of a teaspoonful of salt. Heat the mixture until the sugar is dissolved then boil rapidly and not too long to destroy the color and flavor. Add one cupful of blanched almonds shredded and pour into jelly glasses. Let the mixture cool a little before putting in the glasses as the nuts will otherwise come to the top.

Fowl en Casserole.—Cut the fowl into serving-sized pieces. Dust with pepper and salt and dredge with flour. Brown delicately in a small quantity of fat. As each piece is cooked remove to the casserole. Rinse out the fat in the frying pan and add to the casserole. Cover and cook in a slow oven for three or four hours, or until tender. Just before serving remove the fowl and add to the juices one cupful of milk which has been blended with one and one-half tablespoonfuls of flour. Cook for ten minutes, replace fowl and serve from casserole.

Turnip or Carrot Custard.—Take one cupful of grated raw carrot or turnip, mashed and cooked. Beat two eggs, add the vegetable and one pint of milk, one-half teaspoonful of salt, two tablespoonfuls of melted butter and a few drops of tabasco. Mix well and bake in a dish set into hot water. When the custard is set in the center serve at once.

Magic Power Ascribed to Chinaman's Picture

On the doors of Chinese houses, in early summer, are pasted pictures of Chang Tao-lin, the first Taoist pope, riding on a tiger, says a writer in the New York Times. Probably there are 50,000,000 such pictures so displayed and worshiped during the year, for Chang is supposed to repress evil spirits and to ward off calamity and sickness in the hot months. On the "fifth day of the fifth moon"—usually early in June—when most of the pictures are pasted up, the children are dressed in cheap, tigerlike suits of clothes to keep off the demons, who fear tigers.

Chang Tao-lin is said to have been born on Tien Moh San (Heavenly-eye mountain) in the year 35 A. D. He was asked to be an official; but chose rather to meditate in silence and to cultivate virtue. He went to live in China's western hills and there was shown, by a book given to him from above, how to find the elixir of life, and from other ancient books how to ascend into heaven, how to fly and how to walk among the stars. With these and other magic powers he could fight demons, divide mountains and seas, and rule the winds.

Scotch Freebooter Made Hero of Song and Story

Rob Roy (Robert McGregor or Campbell), Scotch legendary hero, was born in Buchanan parish, Scotland, 1671; died at Balquhidder December 28, 1734. He was the younger son of Donald McGregor, a lieutenant colonel in the army of James II. He got his name Roy from his red hair, and adopted Campbell as his surname. After the accession of William III he obtained a commission from James II, and in 1691 made a descent on Stirlingshire. In 1712 he was evicted and outlawed on a charge of embezzlement. He became a Highland freebooter, and was included in the act of attainder. Under the protection of the duke of Argyll he continued to levy blackmail on the Scottish gentry. He is the subject of a novel by Sir Walter Scott, published in 1818; of an opera by Flotow (1832) and of several plays—Washington Star.

Two Advantages

The house agent decided that he had better be quite frank with his latest clients.

"Of course," he began, "this house has one or two drawbacks which I feel I must mention. It is bounded on the north by the gas works, on the south by an india-rubber works, on the east by a vinegar factory, and in the west there is a glue-boiling establishment."

'Great Scott!" gasped the husband. "Fancy showing us such a place. What a neighborhood!"

"Quite so," replied the agent. "But there are advantages. The rent is cheap, and you can always tell which way the wind is blowing!"

Italian Language

The modern Italian language is developed from the Latin. The earliest definite traces of Italian speech may be found in a document of Monte Cassino, dated 960. Tucan, and especially Florentine, has been the classical literary language almost from the beginning of the national literature. During the first half of the Thirteenth century the mass of lyrical poetry was produced by the Sicilian school at Palermo at the court of the Emperor Frederick II. In the second half of the century the seat of lyrical poetry was transferred to Tuscany. The modern Italian literary language, however, is founded on the Florentine dialect, which was the language of Dante.

Ghastly Trophies

The Jivaran tribes, a group of Indians, living at the eastern base of the Andes in Ecuador and the adjacent parts of Peru, practice the art of shrinking human heads. These shrunken human heads, called tsantas in the native Jivaran tongue, are often seen in museums. The head, after being taken from an enemy, is carefully skinned, sewed up in the back and then shrunk and dried by an elaborate process accompanied by much ceremony. The finished product, no larger than the head of a small monkey, preserves the human expression.

Napoleon's Josephine

Josephine was too indifferent for a mistress, too volatile for a wife; but as the companion of Napoleon she played her part well. As Mr. Wilson suggests, there was something tinselly in each. There was also something enigmatical in each, so that if he often seemed indeed a Caesar, she often appeared a careless, Latin divinity. She was courageous, gentle, soothing and tender, like a great lady; she was also a sobbing, frightened creature, charged with the scents and tales of a tropic night.—London Saturday Review.

Roads of Spain

Spain is a tempting country for the motorist. There are hundreds of miles of beautiful roads rivaling any in Europe, and always new highways under construction. Over wide hot plains and difficult mountain passes and following precipitous rivers they are smooth and broad and made to last forever. What if it is necessary to pass a hay cart? It is not necessary to waken the driver from his nap, for though he occupies the middle of the road there is plenty of room to pass on either side.

Trace English Surnames to Medieval Pageants

There are some names which might well puzzle the antiquarian. Take Whalebelly as an example. There are folk with this strange name in Norfolk. Whence came it?

The answer is: From the medieval pageants which were played all over Europe at one time, and of which the Passion play at Oberammergau is an almost unique survival. Whalebelly probably immortalized the performance of some forgotten actor who took the part, during the eight days' pageant held at Smithfield, of the whale which swallowed Jonah!

Other surnames which probably originated from these religious plays are Farrow (Pharoah) and Asplin (Absalmon). Mildmay is another name with a religious origin. It is a corruption of the Virgin Mary. "Mild" was the recognized character of Mary, hence the formation of the modern well-known surname.

Here is an extract from "Stowe's Survey of London," a very famous old book. "The third lane out of Tower st is called Mincheon lane, so called of tenements there, something pertaining to the Minchins of St. Helen's, Bishopsgate st."

Minchen comes from the German Monch, or Manchin, meaning monk or nun. Thus, Minchin lane, as it is now called, derives from the former residence of nuns there. It also gives us the modern surnames Minuchin, Mincher, Minch and Mince.—London Mail.

"Grapevine" Method of Spreading News in City

In the neighborhood stores of the city there is an underground system of communications that rivals the drum signals of the African jungles. News is spread here as rapidly as was the coming of the British when Paul Revere made his famous ride. A jeweler is robbed, and in no time all the shopkeepers of the neighborhood know all about it. They know the details better, perhaps, then does the victim himself.

The butcher, whose store is next to the robbed jewelry store, runs half a block to tell his friend the delicatessen proprietor. The latter dashes along to pass the news to the tobacco shopkeeper. And so it goes. But when three or more gather to discuss it, words of wisdom issue forth. How to catch the robber, how to avoid being robbed, where the jeweler failed to safeguard his goods—nothing escapes attention. Most agree that the robbed one had too much money lying around and all agree they would not do so themselves.—New York Times.

The Flanders Chain

The "Flanders chain of good luck" seems to exist in Scotland in a number of copies, and it appeals to some kind of superstition. I see that a copy, emanating from Rumania, is described as containing about eighty names, mostly foreign, on a typewritten carbon copy of foolscap, well filled with the names and the appeal. The receiver is asked to make nine copies and send them to friends, which would be not an indirect way of turning friends into enemies. And the further this document goes the longer it grows. This is a pretty good guarantee of its early decease, especially as there are no money prizes.—Weekly Scotsman.

Famous Beauty Is Hibiscus

It has been written of one of Florida's wild flowers that it "is probably the most gorgeous of all the plants indigenous to the United States." This superlative praise was given to a tall hibiscus that opens crimson flowers five to eight inches across, says Nature Magazine. Like several other species of wild hibiscus, this crimson-flowered one blooms in the borders of swamps in summer, at a time when low grounds in many places are gay with the southern red lily, whose upright solitary flower, of red and yellow spotted with purple, tops a stem set with many narrow erect leaves.

Preparing for Emergencies

Pat called upon his friend Mike, and found him sitting in his shed with the much-mended inner tube of his bicycle wheel over his knee.

"Puncture, Mike?" he asked sympathetically.

The other shook his head.

"Then why are you covering the tube with all those patches?" inquired Pat wonderingly.

"Well, ye see," explained Mike, "when I do get a puncture it'll be already mended and all."—Weekly Scotsman.

His Punishment

An Irish fireman, rescuing a woman at a blaze, lost his hold near the bottom of the ladder and landed heavily with the woman on top of him. A doctor, hastily summoned, pronounced him sound, though badly bruised.

"You are a brave man," said the doctor.

"Brave, maybe, but no gintleman," replied the Irishman, rubbing his injuries, "or I'd have let the lady go first."

Executive ability implies something more than giving orders. It demands a thorough knowledge of what is being ordered. The real executive is one who is the absolute master of every little thing entering into his completed job.—Grit.

DOWNIEVILLE ITEMS

DOWNIEVILLE, June 28.—(Special to The Nugget).—Misses Marjorie Taylor and Amy Coupe gave a dancing party to a number of their friends at the Taylor home Monday evening. The guests were Misses Sally Cheek, Sarah Cook, Anita Coupe, Helen Sutton, Anna Costa and Katherine Smith, and Eugene Brown, Charles Cook, Milton Cook, George Taylor, Robert Burman, Warren Scott and Junior Fitzwater.

Frank Nordhoff, who has been visiting Addison Brown for several days, returned to his home in the Sacramento Valley Thursday.

Sheriff Geo. C. Bynon returned Thursday from a business trip to Northern Sierra County and left Friday for Gold Lake.

W. J. Duddleson, mining operator of La Porte, visited Downieville Friday on mining business. Mr. Duddleson was accompanied by his wife and sons.

Mrs. Belle C. Brown, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Brown, Mrs. Wm. S. Brown and Mrs. Dickinson of Gibsonville, were in town last week on mining business. Mrs. Brown is one of the owners of the Gold Cup Hydraulic Mine at Hepisdam.

County Surveyor Geo. F. Taylor has been surveying the mining property of J. C. Kretz at Ramshorn, five miles west of this place.

Chas. Spengler, who is operating the Omega Mine, near Forest, spent several hours at the county seat Wednesday.

Belle C. Brown and Wm. S. Brown have secured a patent to the Gold Cup Gravel Mine at Hepsidam. This property adjoins the old North America Drift Mine, once one of the biggest producers in Sierra County, and consists of 120 acres of hydraulic ground. The Browns have been operating the mine for several years.

CALIFORNIA'S NEW BLUE-SKY RULES

By Letson Balliet.

It is difficult for one to believe that any "blue-sky" law could be framed that would benefit mining. California has put forth a ruling in which I can see possibilities of great advantage to legitimate promotion and development of mineral resources. I am sure that no one interested in mining will criticize the curbing of the illegitimate.

The ruling I refer to prevents all stock exchanges in California from listing, quoting or trading in stocks of unfinanced companies.

It looks like a tough one. But we all have seen hundreds of impecunious, experienced corporations organized, and rush into the markets, where the promoters unload huge bunches of personal stock, and the company is never financed.

Keeps Free Stock Off Market

We have seen promoters hunt up several prominent citizens, and give them large blocks of free stock for the use of their names as directors. This stock is profit at any price, and who sell it before the company is financed, and then say, "I got out before it failed."

Such transactions are like giving a "booster" $5 to step up and play a gambling game, as a lure to bring up suckers, and then have the "booster" walk off with the money and say "It's a gambling game anyway."

We have known of a prominent man being given as high as 200,000 shares for the use of his name, when the name was big enough, and have seen such a man hand the stock to his broker within one hour after getting it, to unload it while the promoters were advertising and capitalizing on his name.

We have heard promoters and brokers whisper to their friends, "We are organizing and we are going to list it right away." These friends would be allowed to purchase large blocks of stock for a few hundred dllars, to pay the filing fees and costs of organization. This stock is then thrown on the market at the opening. The buyer who buys this stock on the market opening has no chance, for the flood of stock prevents the company ever being financed.

How Financing Will Be Done

Exchange brokers can now, under the new ruling select mines that have prospective merit, with a comprehensive plan of exploration and development laid down, and a financial estimate of it scost stated. Permits for securing these finances will be granted under the law and the ruling. Brokers can then urge their clientele to buy the stock for financing, with a promise to list it after it is financed.

There is no hardship in that. The price at which the financing must be done is stated in the permit. All the original buyers for financing get stock at the same price, and then when the financial problem is settled, permits to list will be granted.

When the doors of the exchange are opened to a financed stock with a likely prospect, the trading begins with a mine and a bank account. The speculator knows that he has a chance to handle his stock while the bank account is being spent, and stock fluctuations cannot affect the work in progress because it is financed before the manipulation begins.

Restore Confidence.

There will be no cheap stocks nor free stock to be thrown back on the market, hence I can see possibilities of restoring the public confidence in mine investments when the first buyer knows he buys for financing an industry, and later speculators know they are buying into a mine that has the money to keep right on with its work even if the stock does take a drop.

Frightened stockholders will not rush in to unload on a rumor, because they know that the work is going on, and tomorrow it may be better again. It will make it easier to get the financial subscriptions because the man who makes the financing purchases knows that every one else is in at the same price. No one can cut his throat with cheap stock, and when he does want to sell, he knows the assets of the company are a bank account plus the property.

Furthermore, if a prominent man is given a huge block of stock to become a director, he has to "stand tied" till it's financed. If you give him stock for the use of his name, his name has to stay there, till it is financed. He can't take it out the same day he gets the stock.

Financing Risk Eliminated.

I'd rather go to California, with a legitimate, meritorious promtion, under that new ruling, than to any state in the Union, because the risk of financing is eliminated. Nature's risk, and competency of management, remain—but business and management risks are in every industry—banking included. All other risks, such as "shorting," "profit taking," "promoters' unloading," are eliminated, for the mine goes right on working with its financial bank account unimpaired.

The appointing of a registrar and transfer agent in the jurisdiction of California is only a safeguard to prevent crook operators doing other things outside the state while under the protection of this rhling. The promoters who mean to be square, with a real desire to open a mine fr the production of metal ores for commerrial prfits, will welrome this rulruling and protection, and so will California welcome honest effort at mineral development.—Mining Truth.

GOOD THINGS

As a nation we eat more candy per capita than any on the globe, like it, and find it wholesome and nutritious and yet our confectioners are sending out literature to urge us to eat more. Here are some new ones, which we all like:

Candied Yams.—Take six sticks of old-fashioned cinnamon candy pulverized. Yum, yum—can't you remember when a stick of candy was a great treat? Dice six marshmallows and chop four ounces of Brazil nuts. Slice six medium-sized cooked sweet potatoes and place in a buttered baking dish, sprinkle with some of the marshmallows, dot with butter, using two tablespoonfuls to the dish; add some from a half cupful of raisins, the pulverized candy to which has been added one-half cupful of brown sugar. Repeat until all the ingredients are used, having a layer of marshmallows on top. Bake in the oven until it is a delicate brown. It is well worth a trial.

Patty Shells With Nut Clusters.—Put one cupful of nut cluster candy through the food chopper, add one cupful of whipped cream and a few drops of almond flavoring. Heap in pastry shells and serve well chilled. One may use small cup cakes hollowed out instead of the pastry shells, which will be better if children are to be served.

Butterscotch Pudding.—Mix one cupful of brown sugar, three tablespoonfuls of flour, two beaten eggs, stir well, then add one pint of rich milk and cook until smooth in a double boiler. Just before taking from the fire add one-half cupful or more of peanut brittle which has been crushed fine.

Candied Salad.—This is not new but may be to many: Place a ring of pineapple on lettuce, in the center of the ring place a section of banana to resemble the candle. Top with a red candy cinnamon drop or a candied cherry. Garnish with yellow salad dressing prepared very thick and running down the sides of the lighted candle.

ANDREY J. PONTA NAMED AS NAMED TRAFFIC OFFICER

DOWNIEVILLE, June 30.—(Special to The Nugget).—News of decided interest to Sierra County was received here last week when Bert A. Cassidy advised his local constitutents that Andrew J. Ponta had been named traffic officer for Sierra County by the Motor Vehicle Department. Ponta, who has had years of experience as a stage driver on mountain roads, is the logical choice for the appointment. He leaves on July 1st for Sacramento, where he will enter the training school for traffic officers before donning his uniform.

The need of traffic supervision has long been felt here b,ut pressure of traffic elsewhere has prevented the State from supplying the much needed relief. Through the efforts of Senator Cassidy the importance of policing the Downieville-Nevada City lateral has been made clear to the department resulting in the recent appointment.

THE WHY of SUPERSTITIONS

By H. IRVING KING

BIRDS AND DEATH

"IF A bird alights upon a person's head that person will die." "If a bird alights on a sick person's bed the sick person will die." These are two of the many superstitions common in this country regarding birds with which superstitious people make themselves unhappy. They might spare themselves this unhappiness did they but know that the superstitions in question are merely survivals of the Pythagorean doctrine of the transmigration of souls changed into evil omens by that morbid strain so common in man's mental makeup.

"What is the opinion of Pythagorus concerning wild fowl?" asks the clown in Twelfth Night. To which Malvolic replied "That the soul of your grandma might happily inhabit a bird."

Many savage peoples today are as wise as Pythagorus and believe that the souls of the dead frequently enter birds. George I promised the Duchess of Kendal—one of his left-handed widows—that he would come to her after death if possible and soon after his demise a great raven flew in at the window of the duchess' villa at Wickenham. She chose to imagine that the king's spirit was in the sable bird and took special care of her visitor. Thackeray wonders—for these birds are very longlived—if her heirs took the bird to Hanover and whether "it is still flapping its wings about Herrenhausen." The connection between the doctrine of the migration of souls into birds and the foretelling of death by the alighting of a bird upon a person's head, or a sick person's bed is clear. The alighting of the bird is a presentation of the receptacle for the soul, as it were.

Humorous Americans

"The saving grace of Americans," said a Russian visitor, "is their sense of humor. Without this they would crack from the severe competitive strain that sends them scurrying about the streets at such a mad rate. But Americans can always stop to laugh, and in so doing they provide themselves with the relaxation they would not ordinarily get. This sense of humor is a national asset, and lacking in most Europeans."

TO STOP HER

Teacher—Why should we put a full stop after the sentence, "The woman said she was going after him with a stick"?

Pupil—Why—er—to keep her from going too far.

That's Different

Father—Did you see me shoot that woodpecker on the wing?

Son—You never shot him on the wing. You broke his leg.

And Still He Paid

Dubbson—You paid court to that chorus girl once, didn't you, old man?

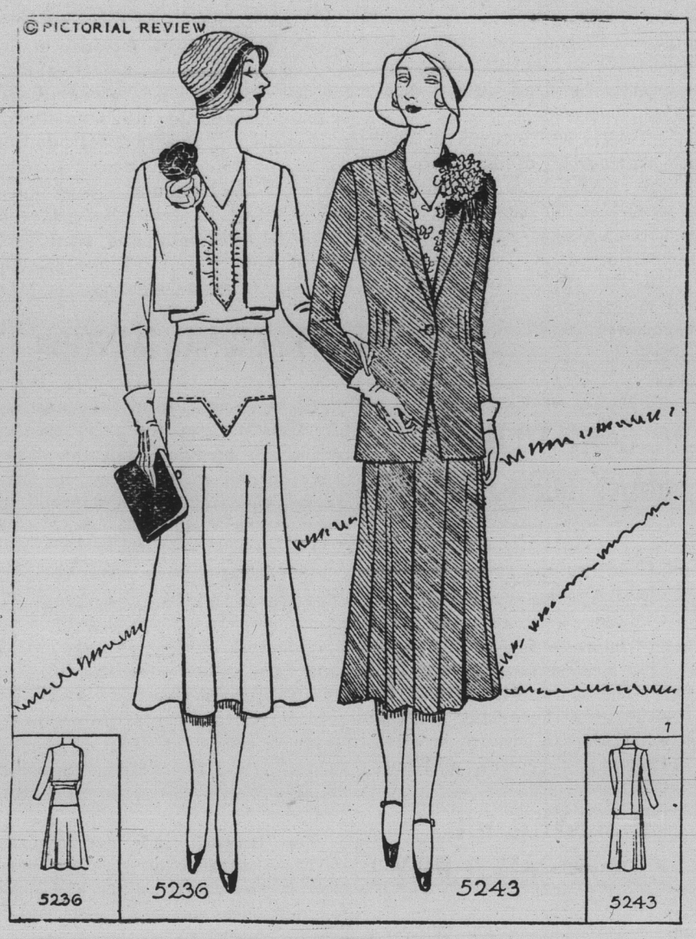
Flubson—Yes, and I'm still paying the court.

The Nerve!

Warden—You say that No. 10,009, the forger, has a strange request to make?

Guard—Yes, sir; he wants some ink and paper to write on, so he won't get out of practice in writing signatures while he's staying with us.

FASHIONS for the SMART WOMAN



TWO JACKET VERSIONS

The most important decision you'll have to make this spring is what kind of jacket suit you'll have—unless you're one of those fortunates who can have two or three. Here we've sketched two versions for you, both of them becoming to the average woman, both of them very smart and new.

The bolero is posed over a one-piece frock which is as chic without bolero as with it. The jacket suit belongs to the nipped-in variety, and the one-button fastening is correct. The skirt has gores for flare in front, and is attached to a hip-yoke. The blouse is sleeveless and tucks in.

QUIET AND PLEASANT

"You say you've had a very quiet and pleasant time at home lately?"

"Yes; my wife and I don't speak."

HEELS OVER HEAD

Poor Suitor—Darling, I'm heels over head in love with you!

She—Well, as soon as you're on your feet I may consider your suit.

FRENCH CORRAL

FRENCH CORRAL, June 28(—(Special to TheNugget.)—Since the light rain of last week the weather has seemed just right and our longest day of the year was spent in comfort. Oh, this is the climate to live in and every one who could afford it should have a summer home on the San Juan Ridge and they should commence with French Corral and keep settling there until there was no more room. No loubt this is really the forecast of what the coming years will bring.

No week goes by but some old-time resident drops in for a peep at what is left of the dear old place. Well, no matter what Time does with the rest of it, our wonderful climate still remains. He cannot take that away.

"Fuss and Feathers" in Presentation at Court

In order to be presented to the Court of St. James it is necessary to be sponsored by the American ambassador or by an important English lady. The summons to appear is issued about three weeks before the day. Regulation court dress, including the prince of Wales feathers, is required. The ceremony takes place in the throne room at 9:30 o'clock. There is a red-carpeted aisle, extending across the room, in front of the throne from door to door. At the appointed time the royal family, preceded by the lord chamberlain and his officers, enter and take their places. The line of members to be presented forms outside the door and slowly files past the throne and out of the other door. As the lady is about to enter, her card is passed down the line to the lord chamberlain, who calls out her name as she stands before the king to make her curtsy. She then curtsies to the queen, and with her head turned toward the royal family makes her way slowly from the room. After the presentations are made, the king and queen rise and bow and the entire assemblage responds. Music is then played while the royal members leave the room.

Virginia Slow to Lose Belief in Witchcraft

Virginia offers an interesting chapter in the history of witchcraft in America, writes Frederick G. Fassett in the Boston Transcript. Ordeal by water is so generally regarded as belonging to medieval times that it is surprising to read of resort to it in an American colony as late as 1706. But there was such resort in the case of Grace Sherwood, a middle-aged woman, the wife of a planter. She was tried on suspicion of being a witch.

The court adjourned while she was taken to a nearby stream and plunged into its waters. As she did not sink, the result was against her. So were certain other evidences of a kind much mentioned in witchcraft literature. She was consigned to jail, but the proceedings against her evidently were dropped. Her name subsequently appears in the record of a civil suit, and her will was probated in 1740, presumably shortly after her death.

Probably Oldest Game

We make no attempt to tell the age of Sambo's familiar appeal to the bones, "Come seben—oh, 'leben, the baby needs a new pair shoes." But in reply to a number of questions as to the world's oldest game the answer is —dice. Most authorities agree that dice-throwing is the oldest amusement in the world. The game of dice, in some form or other, has existed in every period of history. While the invention of the game is attributed to Palamedes, one of the heroes who sailed against Troy, about 1244 B. C., the use of "spotted cubes" for gambling purposes was resorted to even before that.—Pathfinder Magazine.

Making His Last Stand

The ivory-billed woodpecker, king of its tribe, inhabiting the great cypress swamps, probably is making its last stand in Florida, says Nature Magazine. The last breeding record of this giant woodpecker was made by Dr. A. A. Allen, who found a pair nesting in central Florida in 1924. It is now against the law to kill this fine bird. The last stand of the Carolina parroquet was made in Florida. This beautiful little parrot was once abundant but was shot and trapped in such quantities and so persistently that not one has been seen for many years. The bird is now undoubtedly extinct.

Big Water Crystals Found

Water crystals estimated to date back to prehistoric times were discovered recently in the "Cave of the Sister of the Falls," in France, by archeologists who were exploring for traces of primitive man. Some of the crystals are four inches across and an inch thick, and are believed to be the largest ever found. The specimens are perfect and equal to the finest that could be produced in a chemical laboratory under perfect conditions. Remarkable constant climatic conditions in the cave made it possible for nature to produce them.

Historic Indian City

Peshawar is the capital of the northwest frontier province, has figured importantly in the history of India because of its proximity to the famous Khyber pass, the principal northern entrance from Afghanistan. Peshawar is situated in the midst of a horseshoe ring of hills 12 miles east of the fort of Jamrud, which guards the British extremity of the pass. The town has seen the armies of such conquerors as Alexander the Great and Ghengis Khan march on after entering through the pass.

Long Hair Again at 78

Seventy-eight-year-old Anna Csillag of Vienna believes in keeping up with the styles, so is letting her famous hair grow long again. Four years ago she abandoned her six-foot tresses, which had made her famous for half a century, for the bob. Recently she decided that lengthy hair was again in style, and now her locks are already three feet long. Young Viennese women are following her example and many have hair reaching at least to the shoulder.

Goethals Told Them

Perhaps you have not heard of the answer that General Goethals gave to the women of the American colony of the Canal Zone who objected to the men lolling on their screened porches in pajamas, after the day's work was done. "Ladies," said the general, "we are here to do some hard work and these men deserve every comfort they can have. If you object to seeing them resting on their porches in pajamas—there is a steamship leaving for New York every Thursday!"

THE THREE "WISE" MEN

Editor B. A. Cassidy, Dr. J. A. Russell and Wm. G. Lee, the three political "wise" men of Auburn, having gotten the political situation at the county seat well in hand, have set out for "new worlds to conquer." They went to Roseville last week and with a lot of promises and balhuey, induced M. A. Daubin to run against Jerry Seawell for the Assembly. Daubin had resigned his position with the Sterling Lumber Company to take another job in Turlock. He had sold his household belongings and his neighbors had arranged to give him and his wife a farewell party last Saturday night. Even the presents were bought.

Daubin had gone so far as to sign Jerry's nomination or sponsorship papers and listened to the Three Wise Men.

The average voter does not take kindly to political bosses, and everybody dislikes a double crosser.

It is reported that Mrs. Daubin was very much perturbed and asked:

"How are we going to live; what are we going to eat in the meantime,"

"Oh, that's all right," responded the wise men. "We will see that your husband's campaign expenses are paid, and if he loses, Governor Young will put him on his administration payroll."

Poor Daubin! He is simply being used to satisfy the grasping propensities of the Three Wise Men of Auburn.

Daubin cannot be elected, and he will not get any administration job. —The Placer Herald.

TRIPLE POCKET MINE NOW PROPERTY OF A. BROWN

DOWNIEVILLE, June 29.—(Special to The Nugget).—C. J. York has sold his interest in the Triple Pcket mine at this place to Addison Brown. Brown and York purchased the property two years ago from John Rosenfeld's Sons, and have made extensive improvements and repairs, making the mine one of the best equipped in this district. The Triple Pocket is on the same serpentine contack which the Sixteen-to-One, City of Six, Finney, and Bessler mine. As high grade has been taken out of the Triple Pocket in years past, with the sinking of the shaft on the property which is now in progress undoubtedly some very good ore will be encountered. The recent transfer gives Mr. Control of the property.

PIGS MAKE GOOD GOLD DIGGERS

Frank Mitchler of Murphys, the only man in the world whose pigpen produces gold nuggets as well as hams and bacon.

For several years the pigpen has been going right ahead yielding the yellow metal, and seems likely to continue to do so.

The pen is on a part of an ancient river gravel bed which made that neighborhood famous as a placer mining center in the early days. This particular piece of ground has never been worked, the oldest settlers declare.

During the summer the four-footed occupants of the pen pulverize the dirt and root it up for some depth. Then the winter rains come along and wash off the mud, leaving the nuggets behind. No large nuggets have been picked up, but for several years Mitchler has found many bits of pure gold which his porkers have rooted out.—Alturas Prospect.
